Sympathy with Italy.

In the impending war with Europe, Italy is the only one of the belligerent parties that commands our sympathies. As between Prussia and Austria there is but little choice. The bone of contention between them is the Duchies which they robbed Denmark of. Prussia is attempting to carry off the lion's share, doubtless, but it is a quarrel among thieves, and the outside world cares very little which whips.

Austria is the hereditary foe of freedom-the thrice-anointed priest of despotism. Popular rights never had a succession of more unscrupulous enemies that have sprung from the House of Hapsburg. We would not mourn, therefore, should Austria be humbled in the deepest dust.

Prussia, too, under the lead of the crafty and conscienceless BISMARK, has gone a long way towards absolutism. Whatever successes she might gain in the present contest, we fear would be found only to strengthen the power of despotism in Europe.

But in Italy we find a contest inspired by nobler motives-a contest that appeals powerfully to the sympathies of mankind. No people have labored more earnestly, sacrificed more willingly, suffered more terribly, to secure national unity and liberty, than the Italians, It has been the dream of their poets and statesmen for centuries. Though crushed for a thousand years beneath the grinding hoofs of tyranny in a thousand forms, yet the people of Italy still cling with undying tenacity to the idea of a free and united nationality. The revolution of 1858-9, which gave rise to the present kingdom of Italy -a partial realization of the long-cherished hopes of her people-still left several of the finest Italian provinces and millions of inhabitants speaking the Italian tongue subject to Austria. Her rule over these people has been treacherous, cruel, and corrupt to the last degree. It is the prospect of releasing these brethren, and of rescuing these provinces, so that "Italy shall be one from the Alps to the sea," that once more fires the Italian heart, and calls GARIBALDI from his island home. As between Austria and Italy, therefore, all our sympathies are with the latter; and that Italy may triumph we must hope that Prussia will triumph also.

The True Philosophy of Reform.

THE Bible, after all, gives us the true philosophy of reform. The vices and crimes of humanity are not things having separate roots and vitality in themselves, but are rather branches of a common and deeper evil. These separate branches may be lopped off, one by one, easily enough ; but the bad principle remains, and shoots out again in a more luxuriant growth than before. We cannot destroy human wrong by a process of pruning-it must be extirpated,

The Bible proposes to rectify man's conduct by puritying his life. It works from the centre outward. It sweetens the streams by cleansing the fountain. It goes below the outward manifestations of character, and works amid the profounder depths of the spiritual life. It makes the individual a better citizen, neighbor, friend. or parent, by making him at heart a better man. Hence its reforms are permanent, and affect the whole character. They do not work spasmodically or partially, making the man an ascetic to-day only to be a libertine to-morrow, or repressing one vice only to put more strength and vigor into another.

It may well be doubted whether those mere outside and partial reforms, which reach only to certain specific evils, while they leave the secret springs of character untouched, are of any real or permanent value. It is the profound and almost startling remark of one of the deep est thinkers of our times, that "if by a grand comprehensive sweep of reform we could get all the misdoings, that we call sins, out of sight and the sin of the spirit, as a state separated from the consciousness of God, shut in, so as nowhere to appear, it would be the greatest imaginable misfortune. We should have a race acting paradisaically in their behavior, when they have no principle of good in their life," The renovation of humanity must come from an inward impulse. Its shattered harmonies can only be restored by a Divine Artist-its broken columns rebuilt by a Spiritual Architect. The soul, amid its deep distress and its sore sickness. must await the life-giving voice of One who is able to say, "I will; be thou clean."

Liquor Licenses in New York.

New York city is in a muddle over the liquor business. The last Legislature passed a very stringent license law, appointing a new Board to grant licenses, etc. The new Board has been actively at work for some time, has granted licences to a sufficient extent, so that the fees the city has received amount to about one million of dollars, has suppressed the Sunday liquor traffic, and the waiter-girl saloon nuisance, and has apparently gotten matters into a very good shape. Now, however, Judge Carpozo, of the Common Pleas Court, steps in and decides the new license law to be unconstitutional. Of course, the case will be carried to the Court of Appeals for final decision, but meanwhile the old License Board proposes to reassemble and grant licenses to all whom the new Board has refused, and the city is threatened with an interregnum of free rum and rowdyism.

Destitution in Alabama.

VERY great destitution, resulting in much suffering, and, in some instances, in absolute starvation, is reported from Alabama. The condition of the poor there appeals loudly to the sympathies of all benevolent people, and prompt measures should be taken to extend relief to them.

a radical Union man, breathe the right spirit, If the late Rebels generally entertained these views, our political difficulties could very soon be settled. But the trouble is that the mass of them glory in their treason, instead of being ashamed of it, as they ought to be:-

"MI. FERREBEE asked Mr. SETTLE if he had not been in the arm,? Mr. SETTLE: I am comins to that Everybody who knew me at all, knew that I had exerted to the utmost my poor powers to save the Umon, and I had plead in its behalf against secession until after hostilities had actually commenced. I can truthfully say that I cluve to the Umon with affections that knew no bounds, and I witnessed its dissolution with the same feelings that moved my bosom when I stood by the ceath-bed of my father. I had the dreading alternative left of taking the one side or the other. I became a traitor, and went into the Southern army. I went in a spirit or desperation I had the dreadful alternative left of taking the one side or the other. I became a traitor, and went into the Southern army. I went in a spirit or desperation more than of hope. Indeed, my only hope was that by appearing to be united we might compromise the matter. I soon found that it was impossible for such villany and corruction to succeed and it ought not to have succeeded I got out of the army bonorably, and returned home, and advocated peace on all occasions. I endangered by his by so doing. In that twelve mosths of service I continually felt that I was guilty of treason, but others made my course my onlikal ternative for life. It was a bloody tragedy, and the majority who entered the Rebel army were duped and led on by bad, black-hearted men. The difference between me and some other trouters is this; no man, woman, or child has ever heard me boast of it. I have always looked upon the whole matter with regret, and instead of grieving after the dead Confederacy, it cosis me no effort to firmly fix my affections upon the object of my first love. I did all could to prevent the Rebellion, and urged peace after it had commenced. I witnessed with admiration the gallantry of our poor soldiers who were being led to destruction, and plead tor peace in their behalf; and I repeat now what I have said before, that those who pressed this war, after the contest became hopeless, are simply murderers. They were butchering our men without a single hope of success. Those who manugurated the war were the contest became hopeless, are simply muruorers.

Tasy were butchering our men without a single hope of success. Those who manufacted the war were traitors and those who pressed it after it was hopeless were murderers. The crime is on them, the regret is with me. * * I am now cenregret is with me. * * I am now censured because I will not agree to pay the cost of treason and murder. I will never taink or it but to denounce it

Crop Prospects.

THE monthly report of the Department of Agriculture-a department, by-the-way, which has received a good deal of unfounded abuse, and whose able head, the Hon, ISAAC NEWTON, is doing a good work for our agricultural interests, gives us a very encouraging prospect for fair crops all over the country. The returns of five thousand correspondents, in every portion of the Union, show that we may expect at least three-fourths of an ordinary crop of wheat, a crop which has been quite extensively represcuted as almost an entire failure. Rye, barley, oats, clover, etc., also promise a fair yield. Fruit is better than usual in New England and the extreme West-not so good in the Central States. The corn crop is not yet sufficiently developed to be reported.

With half of Europe under arms, the foreign demand for our breadstuffs is likely to be large, and prices will continue high.

SECRETARY SEWARD has transmitted to the several State Legislatures, for their action, the Constitutional Amendment lately passed by

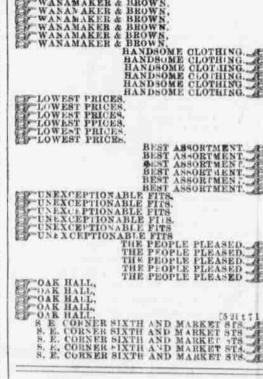

The Legislature of Tennessee has been summoned to meet on the Fourth of July next, to take action upon the Amendment.

THE New York Daily News attempts to make out from the census statistics that there was in 1860 proportionately a greater number of paupers and criminals at the North than at the South. That is very easily explained. The North took care of her paupers and punished her criminals, while the South, notoriously, to a great extent, never did so.
